What is the sequencing of units?

Workshops will run from September to February of Chapter 12 and will cover each of the formal elements, experimenting with a wide range of media.

Pupils will build on their prior learning in KS4 and continue to develop their experimentation and creativity in Art and Design. The A Level workshops have been designed to build upon prior learning from the workshops, Portfolio and ESA research at KS4. In February of Ch 12 pupils will then begin their Personal Investigation. Pupils have to devise a brief from which they will develop their portfolio. This could be a development from their work at KS4 or could be in a new media and exploratory line. Pupils will develop their sketchbook investigative work, A1 research boards and standalone pieces in response to the brief they have set themselves. This portfolio work will be submitted in February of Ch 13.

The ESA will be started in February of Ch 13 following the same investigative process of research with the four assessment objectives of Critical and Contextual Studies, Creative Making and Thinking, Reflective Recording and Personal Presentation. The pupils will again be able to choose from 12 broad starting points and develop work from artists and media of their individual choice. The final piece to this assignment will be completed in a 15-hour exam across 3 days
ESA will be submitted in May.

How do we encourage pupils to see the links between different units and concepts?

Pupils develop skills and use of the Formal Elements through the assessment objectives set by the exam board.

Skills in Critical and Contextual Studies, Creative Making and Thinking, Recording and Reviewing, and Personal Presentation are established at KS3 and KS4. In all workshop's pupils start their creative process by studying the work of others and the world around them. The skills explored in the workshops will then be used and developed throughout their portfolio and ESA. Pupils will be encouraged to use the visual examples across the department. Exam board mark schemes have been converted into a detailed booklet, in pupil speak which breaks down each task and shows visual examples of the work. Teachers will use the exam board mark scheme to complete midterm portfolio reviews and support pupil's refinement and progression of work.

Gallery, museum visits and fashion shows both independently and with school will also inform their practise and concepts.

What are the planned opportunities for adaptive

Through adaptive teaching pupils are challenged at an appropriate level and their needs met e.g. giving additional tasks or re-visiting previous skills.

teaching, including for SEND, the more and able and disadvantaged pupils?	We share our overviews and good practise with support teachers. Scaffolding of taught concepts/practical skills. 6th form students have an art room as a dedicated space which they may use in their frees. Equipment is made available for pupils to develop portfolio work at break and lunch times should they wish to develop their skills away from lesson time or need further support with class or homework. We regularly offer support through Saturday and holiday sessions. We follow strategies implemented by SEND. We ensure we know the students and their needs though regular dialogue with SEND, pupil profiles and the individual student.
What are the planned opportunities for retrieval and reflection by pupils?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Pupils receive live verbal feedback from their teachers and peers whilst lessons are taking place.</li> <li>• Pupils have overview booklets in which teachers and pupils can document self-assessment, notes and drafting written analysis. CWA grades and TG are discussed on an ongoing basis.</li> <li>• Progress Point assessments.</li> <li>• Links to prior learning.</li> <li>• Skill and muscle memory.</li> <li>• Terminology is listed at the start of each unit and are revisited as pupils progress through each unit.</li> <li>• Dialogic Teaching</li> <li>• Refinement and reflection throughout various assessment strategies across the Portfolio and ESA Students will provide workshops for younger students in areas they have developed and also work with KS5 students and visiting practitioners to review and refine practise.</li> </ul>
What are the opportunities for feed forward by the teacher post assessment outcomes?	Teachers and students continually review and reflect through assessments, data, progress points, midterm reviews and mock exams. Pupils continually analyse and review their work in sketchbooks and set themselves targets for development. As all portfolio projects are individual teacher feedback is personalised and recorded on individual pieces of wok and in the overview booklets. Teachers review and analyse data using tools such as SISRA and marksheets. Student voice and surveys are also used to inform planning.
What are the planned opportunities for developing Reading?	Critical and conceptual studies are a vital part of every unit.AT A level a 1000-word assignment also has to accompany the portfolio and the ESA submission in support of their A01 and A03 objectives. Students are expected to develop their critical review work as they develop through their portfolio and ESA with a particular emphasis on their opinions about the work studied.

	Critical studies support sheets.          Past pupil essay examples on display in the department.          Scaffolding sheets for art analysis.          Art specific literacy sheets.          Examples of critical studies and analysis on display across the department.

What are the planned opportunities for developing literacy, numeracy, oracy and SMSC?	Literacy: Correct spelling of subject-specific terminology and vocabulary throughout sketchbook annotation, statements of intent. Essay examples. Numeracy: Composition, gridding /scaling, estimating, symmetry, repetition, perspective and pattern cutting develop numeracy. Oracy: Pupils are encouraged to discuss the art work they study with their peers and in their teacher. In CH 12 students have to give a presentation about their a politically/socially inspired piece of artwork to their peers. Pupils continuously reviewing the work of their peers and giving feedback for refinement and developments. SMSC: Knowledge of a wide range of diverse artists and cultures. Multiple opportunities to study society/community values and use as starting points for their work.          Opportunities to provide artwork and murals for the local community. Taking part in organising Art exhibitions.          Opportunities to develop workshops for younger pupils.
